STABS HIS SON WITH A JACK-KNIFE

Wm. Young, Living South-East of Town, Stabs His Son James in the Heart, While in a Rage of Anger Over His Wife

SON WAS DEFENDING HIS MOTHER FROM ABUSE

The Coroner's Jury Holds Young Over to the Grand Jury on the Charge of Murder and He was Lodged in the County Jail on Tuesday, Pending Trial Later

On Monday last at about six o'clock in the evening Wm. Young, a well to do farmer living about two miles southeast of Antioch, stabbed to death his son James during an altercation issuing from the attempt of the son to protect his mother, Mrs. Ethel Young, from his father's unwarranted attack on her.

William Young and his wife had been in Antioch during the afternoon and, after returning, Mrs. Young was brought three pails of milk which she was expected to take care of. She asked Young how she could possibly do so with only four milk pails to put in, and in reply Young, who had been imbibing a little too freely, commenced a tirade of abuse against his wife and repeatedly threatened to strike her down. On hearing his threats his daughter Emily, a young lady of about seventeen years of age, stepped between her parents and for the time being stopped Young from carrying out his threats. Meantime a younger daughter hastened to the barn, where her brother James was at work and told him that "papa is going to kill mama," and the son there upon ran as fast as he could toward the house. On arriving there he met his father on the back porch and he then said to him "this thing has been going on long enough, and it is time you stopped." Young at that moment had a pocket knife, from which he had been cutting, in one hand, while in the other hand he held a large jack knife, and on being thus confronted by his son he threw the coconut with all his force at the boy, striking him in the mouth, thereby breaking out several teeth and lacerating the mouth considerably. The young man there upon in order to protect himself, picked up a stick of stove wood that was lying near by, and on seeing this Young drove the knife into his son's body striking him between the ribs in such a way that the point of the knife entered the young man's heart. He staggered back and turning started to go through the orchard to reach a neighbor's house, but he managed to walk only a few rods when he fell to the ground. The hired man, who witnessed the attack from a short distance away, hastened to the place where the boy was lying, and endeavored to assist him to arise, but to no avail, he was dying then and gasped his last breath a few moments later, without having spoken a word.

Meantime Mrs. Young who had witnessed the murder of her son was trying with all her strength to hold the door shut between her husband and herself, but he succeeded in pushing open the door and gained his way back into the house. Going into another room he secured a revolver and returning to the kitchen and once more began cursing and swearing at his wife, who then told him that he had stabbed his own son, whereupon he leveled the revolver full in her face and ordered her to "shut up." Mrs. Young then thought that her time had also come, and expected that she would fall a victim to her husband's wrath. But for some reason he changed his mind and turning he left her and then suddenly left the house and went over to a neighbor's house, where he was found some time later, sitting in a chair, calmly talking as if nothing of importance had ever happened.

The news was immediately telephoned to town and at once a posse of men started for the place with the expectation that the man would try to make good his escape, and it was thought that he would be captured only with difficulty, but to their surprise when found he quietly allowed himself to be taken. He stated that at that time he was unaware that the wound had proved fatal and expected that when he returned home the atmosphere would have cleared and the matter dropped.

Into custody and brought to Antioch where he was temporarily confined in the local jail, where he remained from Monday evening until Tuesday afternoon. On Tuesday forenoon, Sheriff George Powell, Deputy Sheriff J. E. Griffin, District Attorney L. P. Hanna, all of Waukegan and Coroner Taylor of Libertyville arrived at this place, and in accordance with the law a Coroner's inquest was held at the home of the murdered boy. The Coroner's jury was composed of Bert Overton, W. H. Osmond, Jacob Savage, J. E. Pollock and Eldora Horton all of Antioch and Sigmund Kopp of Libertyville. After the inquest at the house the jury adjourned to the town hall and the prisoner was brought before them and allowed to testify in his own behalf.

In trying to explain to the jury that the boy's death was due to an accidental fall against the open blade of the knife, Young set forth a very flimsy excuse that was not in keeping with the rest of his testimony, as it was known that the knife entered below the heart with an upward stroke, and the prisoner swore that at the time it occurred, he was standing on the porch, while the son was standing on the ground about a foot below him.

As was to be expected, the verdict of the jury was in accordance with the instructions of the Coroner, namely, that "We recommend that the prisoner, William Young be held to the Grand Jury for murder." On Tuesday afternoon he was taken in custody by the Sheriff who took him to Waukegan where he was lodged in the County Jail.

Wm. Young was a wealthy farmer who has lived in this vicinity for a great many years, and the Young family is one that is widely known throughout the county, and from outward appearances no one could have guessed that such a tragedy would be at all likely to occur within the Young home. The deed was, without a doubt committed at a time when the father was so blinded by anger and rage that at the moment of striking the fatal blow he scarcely realized the enormity of his act.

The murdered man was but twenty-three years of age, being born on the seventeenth day of July in the year of 1882. He was always held in high esteem by all who knew him, and he had on several former occasions been obliged to come to his mother's aid to protect her from similar abuse. He was the eldest child of the family and the only son, and therefore considered it his duty to stand between his mother and his father's tyrannical abuse. The farm upon which the Young family resided belonged to his grandfather, and he had all prospects of a bright and promising future before him. But this was a young man, just entering upon his prime of life, stricken down by the murderous hand of a frenzied father, and he gave up his life for the protection of his own mother, against whom his father's hand was raised in anger. His was indeed a self sacrificing spirit and displayed one of the noblest traits of manhood. It is to be hoped that the father will be made to feel the punishment for his dastardly crime to the full extent of the law.

The funeral will be held (Thursday) afternoon at two o'clock at the M. E. church. The body was interred in the Antioch Hillside Cemetery.

WOMAN BURNED IN FIRE.

Mrs. August Himmelman, of Twin Lakes, Meets With Terrible Accident.

Two fires occurred at the village of Twin Lakes, in the town of Salem, Sunday night, one of which resulted in Mrs. August Himmelman, a well known woman of the village, being fatally burned, while the other resulted in the destruction of a large barn, owned by the Knickerbocker Ice Co. The Lake House, owned by Mrs. Zerfas, one of the best known of the hotels on Kenosha county lakes, was badly scorched, but escaped destruction.

The fire at the Himmelman home occurred just after 9 o'clock. Mrs. Himmelman and her little daughter were alone in the house, and the mother, hearing the little girl crying, started to go from one bedroom to another. She was carrying a large kerosene lamp, and in some manner she slipped and fell and the lamp exploded. Mrs. Himmelman was completely covered with the burning oil, and her shouts awakened the little daughter, who ran to an adjoining house for help. When she returned with help it was found that the flames had burned all the clothing from Mrs. Himmelman and the lower part of her body was charred and burned in a terrible manner. The woman was unconscious, but the flames were extinguished and she was carried to her room. Dr. Becker, of Silver Lake, was called to attend the injured woman and everything possible is being done to lessen the pain. Mrs. Himmelman is alive, but she is so terribly burned that the physician has little hope of recovery. Fortunately the flames did not extend to other parts of house and it was not badly damaged. Mrs. Himmelman is one of the most prominent women in the western part of the county and the accident has caused profound sorrow.

MAIL CARRIERS AS ROAD INSPECTORS

In order to secure satisfactory information as to the condition of the public roads in all parts of the state, and at all seasons of the year, the State Highway Commission has sought the co-operation of the post office department as one of the best means to collect this information.

In a request from Mr. A. N. Johnson, State Highway Engineer, the fourth ass't postmaster general sent a letter to all the postmasters in the state, asking them to give all information at hand as to the condition of the rural free delivery routes. The postoffice department also furnished the State Highway Commission with a list of the rural free delivery carriers in Ill., of which there are upward of 2,800.

Within a few days a circular letter and blank will be sent to each one of the carriers, asking questions concerning the condition of the roads which they travel.

Inasmuch as the carriers have to travel their roads once a day and in some cases more than once a day, every day in the year, they become familiar with every rut and bad place as well as the good places upon their road. They, better than any one else, know the practical difficulties of the road and have the best opportunity to observe closely and intelligently road conditions in all seasons of the year.

It is believed that the information thus collected by the State Highway Commission, covering as it will such close observation on about two-thirds of the total mileage of the roads of the state, will prove a valuable aid in suggesting the proper methods of improving the condition of the roads in any particular locality. The advice of the commission will thus be based on a wide and accurate knowledge of actual conditions.

The method adopted by the Highway Commission to secure this information is of special interest, as it is believed that this is the first time where so complete and extensive a canvass of the road conditions of any state has been made in so thorough and at the same time in so practical and inexpensive a manner, and it shows, moreover, the live interest taken by the post office department in road improvement.

Consolation for the Nobodies.

If you are miserable because you are not great think of the former greatness of Rome and cheer up. For 1,100 years Rome was mistress of the known world. To-day the language of the Romans has almost been forgotten, and the Roman capital has no commercial importance, and is known among men merely as a curio. The Romans, noted as philosophers and soldiers, who invaded and subdued every nation known at the Roman period, are now museum curiosities. Fortunately they have been spared the humiliation of Ramesses II.; in Egypt I saw the body of this great ruler on payment of 20 cents. If you are not great you will at least escape the humiliation of having your body exhibited 2,000 or 3,000 years after death.—Atchison Globe.

TO FURNISH POWER

Chicago-Milwaukee Power Co. to Offer Power in Rural Districts

INCORPORATED COMPANY

Works in Harmony With Electric Railway Company, but Will Not be a Part of the Frost Company Line

Farmers in Kenosha and Lake counties are to have a chance to utilize electricity as a motive power for the various sorts of farm machinery as it is announced that the Chicago and Milwaukee Electric Railway company will go into the business of supplying power to customers in both Illinois and Wisconsin. In order to make this possible a new company has been incorporated under the state laws of Illinois, to be known as the Chicago-Milwaukee Power company. The company will have as its greatest customer the Chicago and Milwaukee Electric Railway company, but it is planned to keep the business of the two companies separate. The company will be in charge of the building and operation of the big $1,000,000 power plant on the flats just north of Waukegan, and it will compete with the several North shore plants for the business of furnishing power to consumers between Highwood and Racine. Later it may be possible for the company to extend the business so as to take in all the territory between Chicago and Milwaukee.

J. E. Drom, who has been connected with the Chicago and Milwaukee Railway company as a general manager of construction, has resigned this position to take the management of the power company and he will personally superintend the building of the power plant and will be prominent in its management.

It is expected that the plant will be completed and in operation by the first of next December and as soon as possible after that date the company will be in the market to supply power. It is claimed that the company will enter the Kenosha field and will seek to secure the contract to supply power to several of the larger Kenosha factories.

It is the plan of the company to cater to the farmers of the two counties and lines will be stretched so that every farmer between Highland Park and Racine may have power for the operation of machinery at a nominal cost. It is claimed that in Ohio agricultural regions where the railway companies have built lines the farmers have been supplied with power and that the plan has proved very successful both for the farmers and for the companies in charge of the power house.

This company will, of course, furnish the power needed for the operation of the Kenosha Electric Railway company and the plant is being built on such a gigantic scale that it will have a capacity large enough to care for all the electric railways between Highwood and Racine besides supplying power to many other customers.

Power stations for the transfer of the power will be built at convenient points along the line and it is probable that a large station will be built just north of Kenosha. There is already one of these station near Winthrop Harbor.

A. O. Frost is the leading spirit in the new company. The work on the power house has already been started but many months will be needed to complete it.

LAND PATENTS HELD UP.

Forty-Two Thousand of Them Are Stored Away in Vaults in Muskogee.

Forty-two thousand patents to land in the Choctaw and Chickasaw nations are lying in the vaults of the commission to the five civilized tribes in Muskogee, duly executed by the governors of the two nations, approved by the secretary of the interior and ready for delivery. The commission is holding them under instructions from the secretary of the interior and the tribal officials assert that the secretary is delaying action in hope of getting authority from congress to take the delivery of these deeds out of the hands of the governors of the tribes and have the work done by government officials. The patents have been a bone of contention between Secretary Hitchcock and the Indian governors for more than a year. The Curtis bill, as now pending, provides that the deeds "shall be delivered under the direction of the secretary of the interior to the party entitled to receive the same," and if this clause becomes a law as it probably will in a short time, it will do away with all claims on the part of the governors to the right of making the delivery themselves.

MEANEST MAN LOCATED

Meanest Man Gives Lead Dollar for Relief of Earthquake Sufferers.

The meanest man has been located again. Every once in a while the meanest man turns up in Kenosha, but the supreme limit has been reached at last and the latest discovered specimen of meanness is entitled to a row of medals as long as that worn by the Sultan of Turkey. In Kenosha where the people are wont to hear the cry of suffering and respond, it is supposed that the men responding will be honest, but it has been discovered that one man who took credit for giving aid to the sufferers of the earthquake turned over to a member of the committee a lead dollar. It was not even a passably good lead dollar, but one so soft and mushy that the committeeman could bite into it.

The member of the committee who got this noteworthy contribution was Alderman C. F. Stamm of the Sixth ward. Stamm proudly carried his contributions to the treasurer and when the money was dumped out on the marble topped table there was a rattle similar to the falling of a pile of lead pipe, and an investigation showed the sham that had been practiced by the supposed contributor to the fund.

Alderman Stamm at once reached down in his pocket and handed out a dollar, the coin of the realm, to make good the shortage, but he is out with a spy glass and he offers a reward of $5.00 for the man who handed him the lead dollar. The alderman insists that if the man is found he will have a medal properly inscribed as "The Meanest Man Yet."

SMALL POX IN ZION CITY.

Three Cases of the Dread Disease Discovered in Dowle's Town.

Small pox has made its appearance along the North shore again, and Friday night Dr. John G. Speicher, the health officer of Zion City, admitted that there were three developed cases of the disease in Zion City. The state board of health has been advised of the existence of the pestilence and proper steps will be taken to prevent any possible spread of the disease.

Dr. Speicher in speaking of the matter Friday evening stated that the health officers of Zion City had taken every possible step to prevent the disease being carried to people in Zion and other cities. As soon as it was discovered that small pox existed all suspicious cases were ordered to the pest-house, and three patients are now being cared for there.

It is thought that the disease found its way to Zion City through some of the people who have recently come from the northern woods to take up their abode in Zion. There is so much excitement on account of the struggle for the assets of the church that the people have paid little or no attention to the small pox cases. It is stated that the patients are being treated by regular physicians and that the quarantine establish is the same as provided for by the Illinois state law.

AGED MAN COMMITS SUICIDE

Old Veteran Hangs Himself in the Barn, Rheumatism the Cause.

Because the rheumatism made life unbearable to him, Joseph Sumeraki, residing about two and a half miles north of Libertyville, committed suicide by hanging himself in a hay chute in the barn back of his residence one day last week.

The suicide is all the more remarkable as Sumeraki is over seventy years old and was known all over the county as one of its cheeriest men. He was an old veteran having been a musician in the civil war. Rheumatism was the only possible cause for his deed and he had been crippled for some time by that dread complaint.

He was seen in the yard twenty minutes before the deed. When he did not come to dinner the hired man, who had unhitched in the barn half an hour before, began to search for him and at 1:30 found the aged man suspended by the neck in a hay chute over one of the mangers. The body was still quivering.

Sumeraki was a resident of Lake County for fifty years. His second wife and child and a son at Lake Forest survive him.

DOG THAT WAS A SMUGGLER

Earned for His Master, But Was Discovered and Killed at His Work.

The official organ of the Belgian customs department mentions the death of a notorious smuggler's dog which earned for his master a modest competence. The latter at first made frequent innocent trips with his big, rough-coated companion across the frontier, until the customs officers had become quite friendly with him. Then his time for action came. He shaved the dog, wound Brussels and Mechlin lace tightly round its body, and put over this a skin closely resembling the dog's own. For five years the dog almost daily trotted with a valuable hidden burden of lace across the border into French territory, and probably the fraud would still be merriely going on had not a "friend" betrayed the secret. The faithful dog came to an untimely end by a revolver bullet. Dogs are often used, it appears, to run with dutiable goods across the Franco-Belgian frontier. This they are taught to do by a course of training which includes sound thrashings at regular intervals by men dressed as customs officials, so that the poor animals run away terror-stricken from the sight of a uniform.

One-Fifth of a Penny.

In a recent bankruptcy case at Düsseldorf, Germany, the postal administration figured as a creditor for the amount of one shilling, a claim for unpaid telephone charges. The dividend declared was fourpence in the pound, and thus the post office became entitled to one-fifth of a penny, or 1.23 pfennigs in German money. Concerning this claim, six voluminous letters have been written by the postal authorities to the official receiver in bankruptcy, necessitating as many replies, and the end is not yet. The receiver is at a loss how to transmit the exact sum of 1.23 pfennigs, and the postal administration declines to write off as a bad debt anything but the precise amount, including the fraction. There is every prospect of a dossier accumulating in this portentous matter.

Why Mustaches Grow Unevenly.

"I can tell you which side you sleep on," said a barber. "You sleep on the right side." "That is true," said the patron. "How did you know it?" "Your mustache told me," the barber answered. "Men's mustaches always tell me which side they sleep on. For the mustache is always shorter, rougher and more uneven on the side that is crushed and crumpled up on the pillow. Your mustache on the left side is long and smooth and tractable. On the right side it is rough, stubborn and a little shorter. So it is easy enough to see you sleep on your right side."

FREAK GERMAN STAMPS.

Pair from Valuable New York Collection Bring an Extraordinary Price.

A rare pair of German five-pfennig stamps in the A. H. Scholle collection sold for $85 at the closing sale on a recent evening, says the New York Times. The stamps were unused, the blue Reichs Post of 1900, which never were put in circulation. The color of the five pfennig of this issue is green. Several years ago a customer of a Berlin stamp dealer showed him one of the stamps that was blue. The stamp dealer took it to the post office authorities and asked if they had issued the stamp in that color. They had not. The color was due to a chemical change. To prove this theory a special sheet of 100 five-pfennig stamps in blue was issued and presented to the Royal Postal museum, which adds to its collection all oddities it can get. The sale of 20 of those stamps through a dealer to collectors raised a storm in the Berlin Stamp society. The government issued an order that no more museum stamps be sold under any condition. Of the 20 blue stamps sold six are in this country.

A used pair of the nine schilling Hamburg issue of 1853 brought $42; an unused two-cent green Labuan, issue of 1879, $17; an unused one-schilling Bahama, issue of 1882, $22; and a used four-centimes, Swiss federal, issue of 1849-50, $61.

Closer Linking of the American Republics

The Coming Pan-American Congress to be Held at Petropolis—A "Solidified Hemisphere"—Past Pan-American Attempts.

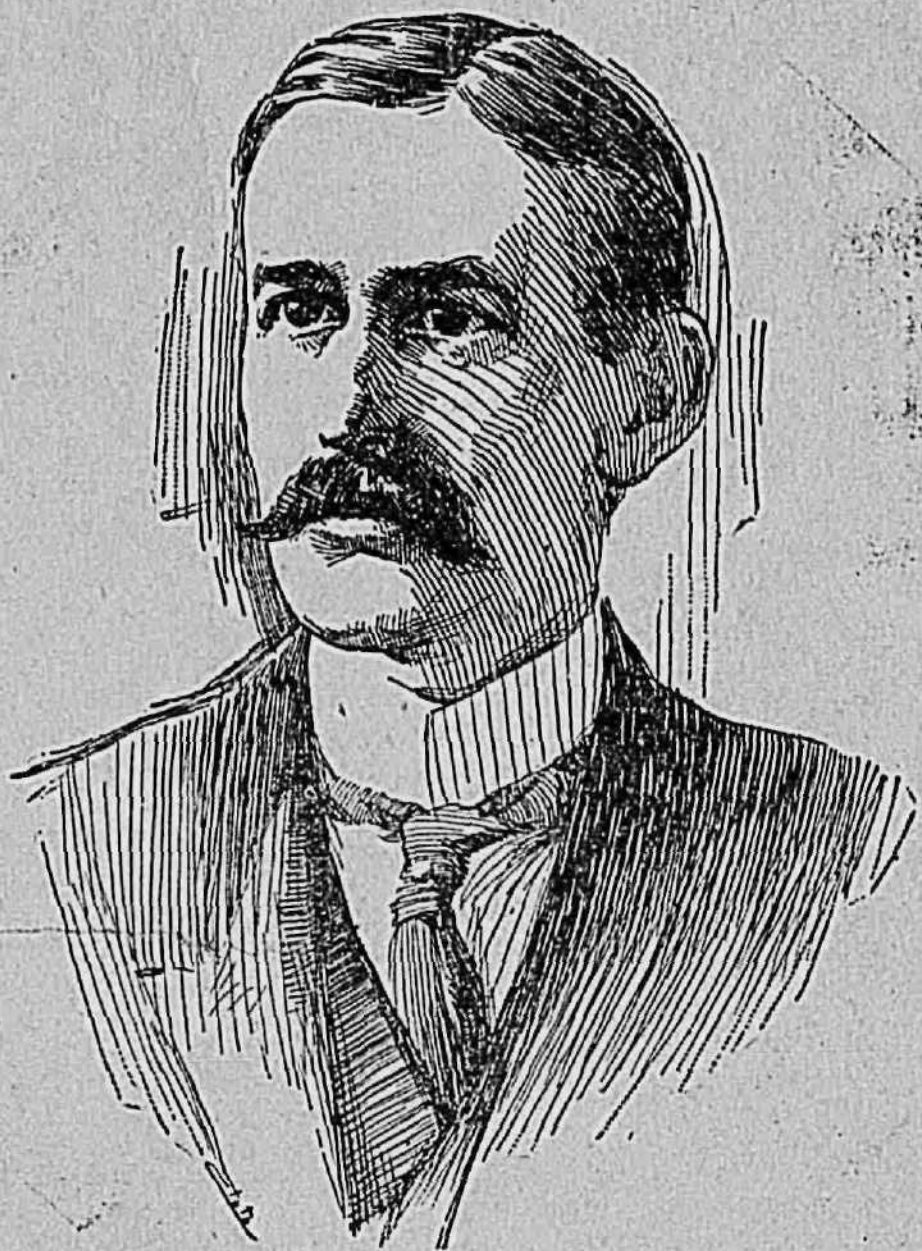

There is no little truth in the criticism of the English that we of the United States presume when we call ourselves Americans. In so doing we not only forget that the Canadians have that right, but that down below the Isthmus of Panama there is a pretty big territory whose people have very good right to call themselves Americans. Of late we have been waking up to the existence of South America, and it is quite probable we shall some day sit up straight with our eyes wide open.

If the United States has neglected South America, there are other countries that have not—namely, Germany, Great Britain and Italy. We have neglected commercial relations with the South American states, we have neglected cementing friendships.

Next July a Pan-American congress is to be held in Brazil, at Petropolis, situated 20 miles from Rio de Janeiro. The United States ambassador to Brazil, Lloyd Garrison, will represent this country, and the conference is to be honored by the attendance of Elihu Root, secretary of state, who does not envoys were appointed and an appropriation voted for the mission. One of the envoys died on the journey, the other did not arrive until after the close of the conference. Only four countries were represented at the Panama congress; it did not turn out a success.

Following this failure various attempts were made to bring the American republics in conference with a view to binding them in closer union. In 1847 a congress was held at Lima, delegates present from five South American republics; this resulted in treaties of confederation, of commerce and navigation, a postal treaty, a consular convention. A second congress at Lima in 1864 arrived at no practical results. At a third congress, held in 1878, treaties of extradition and international law were prepared. In 1881 the central states issued invitations for a congress of American republics at Washington, the purpose of such a congress being the "considering and discussing of methods of preventing war between the nations of America; but a war in progress bego as a formal delegate, but to pay a visit to Brazil and meet with the representatives from the various republics. When Secretary Root first made known his intention to attend the congress, it was readily recognized the move was a piece of diplomacy. But it seems foreign diplomats have thought well to lessen its value, for just at present it looks as though this country was being "queered" with Latin America by means of subtle insinuations of her representatives. The Latin-American wants to be felt a world power himself, does not especially relish that Uncle Sam feels himself necessary as protector and defender. The Latin-American likes the way European nations minister to his sense of dignity, does not relish the way in which the United States has more or less ignored his existence. Wherefore what Secretary Root designed to accomplish by his visit of state to Brazil—traveling on a United States transport and escorted by a squadron of first-class cruisers—may be frustrated by the foreigners' influence. A Washington correspondent last December wrote of a "hemisphere solidified," as a probable result of Mr. Root's journey to Brazil, a hemisphere solidified against European aggression; but it looks now as though the European aggression would have considerable to say about solidifying.

Let us review previous Pan-American conferences and also various attempts that did not bring the desired response. It is popularly supposed Mr. Blaine was the father of such conferences, but before his time efforts were made to bring about the union of the people of the Americas. Back in 1826 there was held in Panama a conference of delegates representing various nations of America, come together for the consideration of subjects of common interest, the movement for organization of an American confederacy largely set on foot by Simon Bolivar, president of Colombia. The United States was invited to send delegates to the congress, and acceptance of the invitation was favored by President Adams and Henry Clay, secretary of state. When the president in his annual message announced ministers would be commissioned to attend there followed a most heated debate in congress; among the various objections raised was the one that the United States should be slow to commit itself to the policy enunciated in the Monroe Doctrine. But finally two concerning the commerce and resources of the American republics; but few of the recommendations were ever adopted by the governments interested.

Our government suggested holding the congress which met in the City of Mexico in October, 1901, which was really Pan-American. The work here consisted of a number of protocols, treaties, conventions, resolutions and recommendations. Mention should be made of the protocol of adhesion to The Hague convention for settlement of international disputes; a treaty of compulsory arbitration, which was signed by ten delegations; resolutions favoring construction of a Pan-American railway.

The work of the Pan-American congress to be held in Brazil next July will be watched with closest interest, the people of the United States now "aware" of South America. CHRISTOPHER WEBSTER.

A GIANT BUILDING

NEW YORK TO HAVE HIGHEST OFFICE STRUCTURE.

It Will Be Thirty Stories High and Will Cost $3,250,000—To Be Located on Lower Broadway at Cortlandt Street.

Giant among office buildings of the world, the City Investing Building company will tower above the great structures of lower Broadway, New York city. This latest product of the architect and builder's art is to be 30 stories high in its central part and 25 stories throughout the remainder. It will cover a ground area of 27,000 square feet at Broadway and Cortlandt street, surrounding the old Benedict building. The western part will cover the site of the Coal and Iron Exchange, at Cortlandt and Church streets, with a frontage in Cortlandt street of 209 feet and of 103 feet in Church street. The Broadway entrance will be in Nos. 165 and 167, and a main corridor 38 feet wide will run through to Church street, a distance of 315 feet.

The cost of this pile will be more than $3,250,000. In line with the policy of Robert E. Dowling, president of the City Investing company, to give to tenants quick and abundant transportation facilities, the building will have 21 elevators.

It is probable that the building will have an entrance to the McAdoo tunnel, which will come up to Church street, under Cortlandt street, and will turn north under the south side of that thoroughfare. This has not yet been decided upon.

In style of architecture the building will be what is technically known as free Italian. The adoption of this type of architecture has given the architect, Francis H. Kimball, an opportunity to produce a structure whose massive appearance will be imposing.

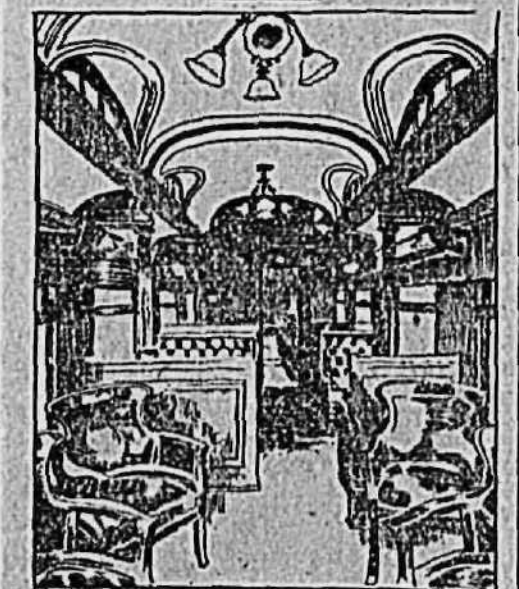

THE MAJESTY OF THE LAW
Not Essential to the Drawing of an Understandable Will.

Every man who has ever tried to guess one of those conundrums known as insurance policies, or who has ever attempted to translate into intelligent English any legal document, with all its whereases and its heretofores and its ands, will appreciate the sentiments of Deacon Elphoxo Youngs, of Washington, who, when making his will, harrowed to the lawyer's opening paragraph and then exclaimed:

"Rats! all there is about this is that at my death I want by ever-faithful and devoted wife, Amelia, to have and control everything I possess."

If that will would not hold in law, says the Four-Track News—there being no possible room for doubt as to the intent thereof—the fault is with the law, not the will.

TRAVELING ON HIS RIBS.

Russian Tramp Was Doing the Stunt Worked by the American Tramps.

Poulney Bigelow, who knows Russia well, was describing the Russian muzhik.

"The muzhik is naive," he said. "Here is a story that they told about him."

"A muzhik of Moscow boarded the Petersburg train and in due time the conductor came and asked for his ticket."

"I have no ticket," said the muzhik, naively.

"No ticket?" cried the conductor. "Then off you go, you scoundrel, at the very next station."

"And at the next station, accordingly, the muzhik was put off with a half dozen thumps in the ribs."

"He waited till another Petersburg train came along, he boarded this train, too, and at the next station, with more thumps in the ribs, he was again put off."

"Undaunted, he boarded the third train and a third time he was beaten and put off."

"A passenger who alighted at the same place was interested in the muzhik, and said sympathetically:

"Where is it you are going, my friend?"

"The muzhik with a patient smile replied:

"To St. Petersburg, if my ribs will stand it."

THERE IS COAL ENOUGH.

Plenty of Fuel to Last the World for Thousands of Years.

The total known coal production of the world is something like 790,000,000 tons per annum, and experts state that even at this rate of production, there is sufficient coal to last thousands of years to come. Some faint idea can be gathered from these figures of the enormous quantity of coal there is on this planet, and so one can better appreciate the statement made by Sir Robert Ball that all the coal of the earth would not supply the sun's heat for one-tenth of a second.

There are many interesting facts about the sun which are not common knowledge. For instance, if the clouds were removed from the sun our lungs would lose all its brightness, and the sun spots, about which we have heard so much, are merely places where the clouds are broken.

It is interesting to know that the power of the sun to warm us depends on an element so important to our life here on earth, such as the rose-colored prominences on the sun, which consist of hydrogen.

Putting it Strong.

The story goes that all the 1906 onion crop of Bermuda has already been sold in advance of production to an Englishman who proposes to bring out a cure for consumption, having onion-juice for its chief ingredient.—Hartford Courant.

A Trite Saying.

It is a trite saying that no man is stronger than his stomach. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery strengthens the stomach—puts it in shape to make pure, rich blood—helps the liver and kidneys to expel the poisons from the body and thus cures both liver and kidney troubles. If you take this natural blood purifier and tonic, you will assist your system in manufacturing each day a pint of rich, red blood; that is, assisting to the brain and nerves. The weak, nervous, run-down, debilitated condition which so many people suffer from, is usually the effect of poisons in the blood; it is often indicated by pimples or boils erupting on the skin, the face becomes thin and the feeling of fatigue. Dr. Pierce's "Discovery" cures all blood humors as well as being a tonic that makes one vigorous, strong and forceful. It is the only medicine put up for sale through druggists for like purposes that contains neither alcohol nor harmful habit-forming drugs, and the only one, every ingredient of which has been subjected to the endorsement of the leading medical writers of this country. Some of these endorsements are published in a little book of extracts from standard medical works and will be sent to any address free, on receipt of request therefor by letter or postal card, addressed to Dr. R. H. Pierce, Littleton, N. H. It tells just what Dr. Pierce's medicine can do for you. The "Words of Praise" for the several ingredients of which Dr. Pierce's medicine is composed, by leaders in all the several schools of medical practice, are recommending them for the cure of the diseases for which the "Golden Medical Discovery" is advised, should have far more weight and influence than any amount of the so-called "testimonials" so conspicuously flaunted before the public by those who are afraid to let the ingredients of which their medicine are composed be known. Bear in mind that the "Golden Medical Discovery" has the BADGE OF HONOR on every bottle wrapper, in a list of its ingredients. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation, invigorate the liver and regulate stomach and bowels. Dr. Pierce's great thousand-page illustrated Common Sense Medical Advisor will be sent free, paper-bound, for 21 one-cent stamps, or cash in advance. Address Dr. Pierce as above.

The big annual picnic of the Northern Illinois and Southern Wisconsin Modern Woodmen is to be held this year at Freeport. The date is June 7th. Excursion rates are to be made on all roads and thousands of Woodmen will be in the big parade.

We are informed that the Minneola hotel at Fox Lake has been sold to the Blatz Brewing company, and that John McMahon and Ben. Cox, of Lake Villa, have leased the hotel. We predict for these gentlemen success from the start as they are thorough business men and will make the Minneola a popular resort.

Some of our boys seem to have the gymnasium craze. That is right and proper, but after all the cheapest and best gymnasium in the world is that which will exercise every bone and muscle in the body, is a flat piece of steel stretched on one side, fitted tightly into a wooden frame, and after being greased on both sides with a bacon rind, rubbed into a stick of wood laid lengthwise on a back.

Kenosha is having more labor troubles and this time it is the bakeries of the city which are affected. Wednesday night all the men employed in the seven bake shops of the city declined to go to work and the strike is on. The men have had little effect on the bread and pastry supply of the city, as the men in all the bakeries save one were working. Wednesday night and boxes put on their caps and aprons and took the places of the strikers.

A young man went to the preacher to get married, and the preacher asked "How old are you, John?" He replied "I am half as old as my father. He is two years older than my mother. My oldest sister is two years older than my youngest sister. My youngest sister is four years older than my youngest brother. How old are they altogether?" asked the preacher. The young man replied "That the five children are seventeen years older than his father and mother. How old is John and each of the children and the father and mother?" Exchange. Well, the young man isn't married until the preacher gets his age figured out. Maybe he would be a kid compared to him.

The Barker Lumber company, who have been in business here for a number of years, have sold out their interests to the Goodrich Lumber company of Delavan, Wis. The new firm comes here highly recommended and are very pleasant gentlemen to meet and we predict for them a share of the success that their predecessors have enjoyed. The manager, Mr. R. C. Higgins, to whom much of the prosperity of the old company is due, is to be retained by the new company.

On Wednesday evening of this week the members of the Antioch Chapter O. E. S. entertained the Grayslake and Millburn Chapters and on that evening two candidates were initiated into the order. After the initiatory services a fine banquet was served in the basement of the church. A large number from each of the neighboring Chapters responded to the invitation and the occasion was one that will long be remembered by those who were present.

First real warm weather is promised by E. R. Hicks May 5, to be followed by a regular storm period from the 9th to the 12. A regular storm period runs from the 19th to the 23rd. This promises to be the most active violent period in May. It is a regular volcanic period, covered by Mars and central with the mercury period. The outlook for this whole period is threatening but Hicks names Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, the 21st, 22nd and 23rd, as danger days. The last day of May is the beginning of a regular storm period which will express itself during the opening day of June.

A young mother chanced to occupy a seat in front of us on a train last week, when an amusing incident occurred. She was vainly endeavoring to quiet her youngster who was apparently about two years old. The young cherub had gormandized vast quantities of fruit, nuts, etc., and seemed to be in great misery and positively refused to be comforted. Finally an old gentleman who was sitting beside the distressed mother, and whom we took to be her father, remarked: "Jenny, I'd larrup that kid. Oh I hate to whip a child on a full stomach," said she. "Looks to me like it'd be any matter to turn it over," was the quiet reply.

"Rote of Waves." It is a favorite theory with fishing and sea-faring people that in a storm three waves are strong and violent, while the fourth is comparatively weak and less dangerous. This succession they call a "rote of waves." Fishermen returning from their fishing-ground often prove by experience the truth of their theory, and hang back as they come near the shore to take advantage of the lull that follows three big breakers.

Public Highways in Some Locations are in Need of Attention

A Reader of This Paper Explains His Views Relative to the Betterment of Existing Road Conditions

DEAR EDITOR:—

Will you kindly allow me enough space in your paper to say amen in response to the article published in last week's issue of the "News" relating to the existing conditions of our public highways.

I am glad to know that there is one person who is public spirited enough and is not afraid to express his opinion on a question of such vital importance as the past, present and seemingly the future indifference paid to the repairing and maintenance of our public roads.

In driving over a portion of the roads in Lake County I have noticed in some localities or districts that to all appearances no attention is given them whatever, and in fact would judge by observation that they were entirely ignored. In this age of progress and advancement it is surely not in keeping to allow such conditions to exist, and it certainly is high time that the public should cry out and demand that something be done to remedy this evil. It seems to me as though our road tax, if it was properly applied and used with economy, is sufficient to keep and maintain the roads in a fair condition at least. The old habit or custom of putting off working on the roads to a time when the farmer could do nothing at home, or at any time it was convenient for him to do so, should not be tolerated. If it is not it should be the duty of the Road Commissioner to see that the overzealous had their districts properly run over with the grader or scraper when the roads are badly cut up and are in need of attention.

I do not know that the officials at the head of the system should be blamed more than the apparent laxity of the law. At least let us try to improve the present condition and emulate other localities that have good roads.

Yours for Improvement,
C. E. Bruy.

TWO NAMES OF FAME UNKNOWN.

Ungrateful Engineer Relates Story Hard to Believe.

"You sometimes cannot always tell," remarked H. M. McCartney of the Western Pacific engineering department. "The people from whom you are prepared to expect the most are frequently deficient and disappointing. I met a lady from Kentucky some time ago. She was a school teacher. We chatted on various topics, and, among other things, she asked me: "Whom do you consider the greatest man Kentucky ever produced?" "There can't be any dispute about that," I replied, "Abraham Lincoln." "Aren't you mistaken?" she said. "Lincoln, you know, came from Illinois."

"Well," I said, in an excess of gallantry; "if that is your understanding, we will let it go at that."

"What state do you come from, Mr. McCartney?" she asked.

"Pennsylvania," I replied.

"And whom do you consider the greatest man that ever came from Pennsylvania?" she continued.

"Daniel Boone," I told her.

"Daniel Boone? And who was he?" "Well I informed her, among other things, he discovered and settled up the state of Kentucky."

"And she was a school teacher. And from Kentucky,"—San Francisco Herald.

CHILDREN'S SHOES

A child's foot is bound to grow just so fast. If you crowd it in one place, it grows all the faster in another. That means distortion and crippled feet. Engman's shoes are the exact shape of the foot, with a little extra room for the toes. Therefore there is no crowding or distortion, and "the feet grow as they should."

According to the report of the first complete census of the British empire, the population is about 400,000,000, of which only 54,000,000 are whites. The race problem in America does not amount to much in comparison with this one.

Gold-bearing quartz assaying $2,000 a ton was recently taken from the shaft bored under a high office building in New York to accommodate the plunger of the elevator. The quartz was found one hundred and eighty feet below the surface. This is simply another evidence of the fact that the man who gets gold out of New York has to dig deep for it.

The English is a living language and is bound to change both in spelling and grammar. There was a time when the split infinitive was more widely accepted than it is today and the double or quadruple negative was in good repute. There was also a time when spelling was so different from present usage as to be nearly unintelligible now—which caused Artemus Ward's witty remark that Chaucer may have been a great poet but he could not spell. As long as a language is alive change is its order, as it is with any living thing—change is life.

The foreign commerce of the United States approached the $3,000,000,000 point in the calendar year 1905. The total imports and exports of merchandise for that year, as shown by the department of commerce and labor, through its bureau of statistics, was $2,806,000,000, against $2,307,000,000 in 1900, an average increase of $100,000,000 a year in the five-year period. If to the $2,806,000,000 of foreign commerce in 1905 were added the figures of trade with Hawaii and Porto Rico, formerly foreign territory and included in our statements of foreign trade prior to 1901, the total would approximate $2,900,000,000, or about $600,000,000 more than five years ago and $1,200,000,000 more than ten years ago.

In Texas, where people do surprising and original things, the institution of marriage after probation has been introduced. The thing was started by a rich farmer who advertised for a wife, but specified that the applicant should serve as his housekeeper for a certain length of time in order that he should have a chance to prove her ability and temper. It happened that the farmer was satisfied with his very first applicant and married the lady after a brief period of housekeeping probation. It is to be hoped that the pair will live happily ever after. But the real fact is that their "probation" began only after they were married. Marriage is an institution for which success in mere housekeeping is no test at all. An excellent housekeeper may make a very poor wife and a good employer does not always make a good husband.

Within the last few years much progress has been made in reducing farming to a science. The United States department of agriculture has long been working to that end. The up-to-date farmer no longer works in a haphazard manner. He has learned to study the nature of his soil and ascertain the crops that will best grow in it. The department of agriculture is constantly searching for the new productive plants which will thrive under all the varying conditions in the country. Crops can now be cultivated profitably in what for ages has been waste land. The farmer has a wide range in selecting what crops he shall produce. He also has the benefit of many methods of cultivation from which to choose. It is predicted that in 1910 the yield of much land, heretofore, will be twice what it was in 1900.

The people of Maryland deserve the thanks of the rest of the country for restoring to its original condition the room in the old state house at Annapolis in which Washington resigned his commission as commander-in-chief of the Continental army on Dec. 23, 1783, and in which the treaty of peace with Great Britain was ratified on Jan. 14, 1784. The room remained unchanged till 1838, when it was refurnished and most of the old furniture sold. In 1831 the room was again furnished and some changes were made. Other changes in 1878 destroyed all semblance to the room as Washington knew it. With Trumbull's painting of Washington's farewell to guide the workmen, the task of restoration has been completed. The room is forty feet long, thirty-five feet wide and twenty feet high. It is finished in the colonial style. The walls are white and the woodwork is green, the original color. The presiding officer's chair stands on a dais backed by a recess and surmounted by a Greek pediment resting on fluted columns. The chair which Washington used has been found, and it, with many other of the original furnishings, is now within the room.

It is probably true that the automobile "has come to stay" and that in the course of time and experience the rules and regulations for its use will crystallize into fairly just and well-understood form. But this will not be attained without the needless loss of many valuable lives. In New York one day recently there was, among other tragedies of the street, the sudden killing of two old ladies. The navigator of the machine saw the women, it is said, and "expected of course that they would get out of his way," and because they did not he just ran them down and then—ran away himself and left them there. As a matter of fact they were no more bound to keep "out of his way" than he to keep out of theirs, and if they had enforced their claim against him with force they would have been no more at fault than was he. In the same city a little time before a motorman on a street railway—where he was confined to his track and could neither swerve from it nor run away after his act—ran down and killed a teamster and was sent to the penitentiary for ten years for criminal carelessness. Probably the sentence was just. Neither the street car nor the automobile reveals any of the nervous sensitiveness of the horse that has often saved his driver from homicide. At this view alone these drivers of machines should be held to a stricter responsibility than the drivers of horses. As a matter of fact they are not held to as strict responsibility. Time out of mind the laws of civilized communities have prohibited drivers of horses from speeding them beyond certain fixed limitations except in places especially provided for speed, in which well-defined places all men must be on their guard. The drivers of the new highway machines should be similarly restricted. It makes no difference that high speed is their chief aim. They should not be permitted to pursue that aim except as horsemen are permitted to pursue it. This is the ground to which the use of the automobile must come at last, and the sooner the lawmakers and law enforcers see the truth and act toward attaining it the better it will be for all of them as well as for the imperiled and already greatly exasperated public.

SLEEPS WHILE AWAKE.

Chameleon Is Said to Possess This Unusual Faculty.

To all appearances and according to the researches of those best capable of forming an opinion on the subject, the nervous centers in one lateral half of the chameleon go on independently of those on the other, and it has two lateral centers of perception—sensation and motion—besides the common one in which must reside the faculty of concentration, says the New York Herald. Notwithstanding the strictly symmetrical structure of the chameleon as to its two halves, the eyes move independently of each other and convey separate impressions to their respective centers of perception. The consequence is that when the animal is agitated its movements resemble those of two animals, or, rather, perhaps, two halves of animals glued together.

Each half wishes to go its own way and there is no concordance of action. The chameleon, therefore, is the only four-legged vertebrate that is unable to swim; it becomes so frightened when dropped into water that all faculty of concentration is lost and the creature tumbles about as if in a state of intoxication.

When a chameleon is undisturbed every impulse to motion is referred to the proper tribunal and the whole organism acts in accordance with its desires.

The chameleon, moreover, may be fast asleep on one side and wide awake on the other. Cautiously approached at night with a candle, so as not to awaken the whole animal at once, the eye turned toward the light will open, begin to move and the corresponding side to change color, whereas the other side will remain for a longer or shorter time in a torpid, motionless and unchanged state with its eye fast shut.

One Man's Evil

By EFFIE ROWLAND

CHAPTER I.

The scene was lonely enough, yet not without a touch of beauty. For miles around not a habitation could be seen; everything was silent and solitary; in fact, there was something incongruous in the gleaming metals of the railway that wound itself, snake-like, through the verdure-clad country, and the little wayside station had a very desolate air save when some big express train drew up for a few minutes to board the small mail-bag or such stray passengers as the nearest settlement beyond the hills had to send on the road to civilization.

There were only a man and a youth in charge of this depot, yet on this particular day the rough platform had a fair complement of people. Strange-looking individuals they were, all clad alike in a somber kind of uniform, and sitting for the most part in a stolid, gloomy fashion.

It was only when they moved in obedience to the sharp, rough voice of a man who seemed to be guardian to the whole party that the clink of iron revealed the fact that these men were prisoners. The man in charge of the little railway station had eyed the gang dubiously as they had alighted from a special carriage in the last express.

"It seems mean," he said to himself, "to eat when maybe it's hours since they have tasted food. There's one of them," he mused on, glancing toward the end of the line, "that looks fair done out. Not a bad face that, neither; must have been handsome. At any rate, he don't look like the others."

The man about whom he mused was sitting with his hands clasped between his knees, and his eyes fixed almost abstractedly on the distant beauty of the landscape. At first it would have been easy to have classed him in with the rest of his companions, but the eyes of the north-countryman had been acute. There was a certain directness in this prisoner's gaze that the others were lacking, more delicate build, and though his face had a worn, sad expression, there was nothing evil in it.

He seemed to be one by himself, for the man further noticed that, as the warders passed to and fro, or stood speaking to each other, there seemed to be a kind of mute conversation passing between their charges.

The thought flashed through the mind of the station master that it was a dangerous looking gang, that upon which he was gazing, and even while this thought crept into definite form he sprang to his feet.

All at once that line of gray-clad automatons was a moving mass. The still summer air was broken by discordant voices and brutal cries. The two warders were surrounded.

The attack had been so swift, so unexpected, that they were taken off their guard. Before they had time to get at their revolvers their arms were pinioned, and the weapons had been dragged from them.

The station master was not one to stand by and see such things without joining in. He rushed from his office across the line. Everything passed in a blur, confused fashion before his eyes, yet he had instantly noted that the man who had attracted his attention as being different from the rest was not one of those who had brought on the assault.

This man was standing apart, leaning in a half-dazed fashion against the shed. His feet were chained together, yet all at once, as the man from the office sprang on to the platform, he, too, moved forward. Swift as lightning he pushed himself into the struggling throng. With such heavy loads about his ankles it was not easy for him to move, yet a kind of superhuman strength passed into his veins as he pulled off the man who was trying to choke the life out of the poor creature lying at his feet.

"No!" he cried, and his voice sounded strained and hoarse, and yet was full of authority. "You shall not murder him! He has done you no harm! What do you want—your freedom? Well, take it while you can; but don't stain your hands with an innocent man's blood!"

His words were greeted by a storm of curses, some menacing, some exultant. It looked for a moment as though the man, as if he, too, would lie on the ground beside the self-strangled man who, but a moment before, had been guardian to this unruly crowd; but the common sense lay beneath his words struck home suddenly.

Having robbed the warders of their keys, as well as their weapons, it was an easy matter to unlock the chains from the feet of all the prisoners, and in an incredibly short time the station platform held none of them save that one who, at risk of his own life, had stood between his late comrades and murder.

Not knowing exactly how to act, the station master had watched these proceedings standing aloof. He was ready to have rushed to the warders' assistance had he not been forestalled in this. As it was, he busied himself pouring hot water between the pale lips of the younger of the two warders, who had been less badly mauled than his companion, and while he did so, his eyes went with admiration to the figure of the convict who still knelt beside the other man, endeavoring to give him help.

"He's a brave lad, and no mistake," said honest Ben Coop to himself. "I was right to have picked him out from the rest. Whatever brought him to this, he's not fit to be wasting his life out in a prison yard, that's pretty sure."

The injured man. The prisoner recovered his strength and his calmness. He swallowed a mouthful or two of food that had been given to him, not because he cared in the least to eat it, but because he had been touched by the kindness shown him, and it was a natural instinct with him to return courtesy for courtesy. After a few minutes Ben turned to him again.

"He is come to," he said; "but I don't think he will be fit for much this day or two. It was pretty quick work, and I am sorry for this bit of land, with all these secondaries loosing upon it."

"Where will they go?" asked the convict, in a low voice.

His eyes wandered around the landscape, that lay so placid and beautiful in the sunshine.

"I expect," Ben said, thoughtfully, "this was a put-up thing. There must have been one of them as knows their ways about here. The town, as they call it, lies a good three miles away; but they will make their way to it. You didn't go with them," Ben said, suddenly. "Why?"

The faintest of faint smiles passed over the face of the convict.

"My path is not with them," he said. "Besides," he added, with terrible bitterness, "I am content to be what I am, to stay where I am. Freedom is a dead word to me."

"Ay, man," exclaimed Ben Coop, "without emotion, but that is a terrible thing to say."

He felt his heart moved more and more by this strange man. As the time drew near for the train to approach Ben went up to the prisoner and stretched out his hand.

"I feel all the better for having known you," he said. "I hope some day I'll see you in different straits to this. If ever you need a friend, lad, make your way here; there will always be a bite and sup for you wherever Ben Coop is."

For an instant a great change passed over the face of the convict; the cold despair dropped from it; the eyes seemed to shine and the lips to smile.

"Thank you, friend!" he said. "And God bless you! It does me good to hear you speak, for I believe you come from the same part of the old country as I do."

"I am Lancashire, sir," Ben hurried to say. "I was a pit lad, working since I can remember in the mines of the Mill Cross estate."

The light all went out of the other man's eyes, and the lips grew cold and white. He paused a moment, and then he spoke, deliberately and most bitterly.

"There is a name struck out of the annals of the Mill Cross family; there is one missing who is not mourned, one who is dead in honor, though living still. If ever you go back to the old country, ask them to tell you the story of that lost man, Ben Coop, and when you hear it think of me."

The train whizzed up to the little platform; the young warder ranged himself beside his prisoner. In an instant there was a group of car men clustered around him, listening to what had happened.

Ben was called upon to give his testimony, and half a dozen hands were put forward to carry the wounded warder to a berth in the train.

There was no more time or opportunity for Ben Coop to snatch a word with his fellow countryman. He watched the prisoner pushed into a kind of van, and the back of the lock with a cold sensation at his heart.

He performed his usual duties in a far-off, dazed manner; and then the train moved slowly out of the station, and Ben was left alone, with only the memory of that pale, sorrowful face to remain with him.

CHAPTER II.

In sunny June London wears its pleasantest aspect. There may be a vast amount of selfishness, callous extravagance and other uncharitableness cloaked beneath the gaiety of a London season; nevertheless, there is that indescribable sensation of life, and the enjoyment of life, found floating in the atmosphere. And there are some people who seem born simply to live in this atmosphere of perpetual amusement and whirl of fashion. Such a one was Lady Betty Marchmont.

She came of an old Irish family, and possessed any amount of cousins and nieces, who were only too enchanted to spend a few weeks with her; but she had not been very successful as a chaperon. The world would not take her seriously in this light; and after a little while her various charges gradually realized that it was not such a pleasant thing as they had imagined to pass a season in town with "pretty Aunt Betty."

When the last of her debutantes had gone back to the country, Lady Betty had declared to herself that she would have no more girls. But she made it a point of appearing very sympathetic and charming to her husband, and when she had heard all he had to say on a particular occasion, she quite delighted him by the ready way in which she fell in with what he had arranged.

"My dear Ned!" she cried, "of course your brother's child must come here. Why has she never been before? An heiress, you tell me? Well, that's something very desirable in this particular age; and no doubt she is beautiful, too."

There was a degree of sarcasm in this remark, which, happily, escaped Mr. Marchmont; he did not notice that his wife's bright eyes had glanced up and down at his tall, ungainly figure as she said these words.

Mr. Marchmont looked over his blue spectacles at his wife.

"I don't think Antonia has any intention of marrying," he said carelessly. "I explained to you, my dear, I have taught the girl to come to me, because I have learned that she has a very dull and dreary life in the North. You must not expect to find her frivolous."

Lady Betty groaned in spirit. She felt that she could quickly conjure up a picture of this unknown girl. Fortunately, she was going to a very bright luncheon party, and the necessity of making herself look as pretty as possible helped to dissipate the vision that her imagination had conjured up of the girl, who, before another week had gone, was going to be under her care. Nevertheless, she could not live without sympathy, and a few hours later she found herself demanding this sympathy from the man who sat beside her at lunch.

Lady Betty had more than a penchant for Gerald Tenby. She always had two or three handsome young men dawning after her, and her vanity had been extremely gratified when Mr. Tenby joined the ranks of her admirers—for Gerald Tenby was a man about whom society was beginning to talk.

The money that would come to him was counted by the world as something fabulous. Everybody knew that the Mill Cross estate was no mere bagatelle; that apart from the coal interest the head of the family possessed wealth that rolled from thousands into something like millions. It was no wonder, therefore, that Gerald Tenby found himself a society favorite.

"You must be very kind to me to-day," she said to him, as she ate a dainty lunch and caught a refreshing glimpse of herself from time to time in one of the many mirrors. "I have had a great shock."

"I hope nothing has happened," he said.

"Nothing has happened except the unexpected," Lady Betty replied. "My dear old husband has recalled himself to my existence in the most annoying manner, for he wants me, just when I had determined not to be bothered with any of my own tawdry relations, to play the chaperon to some lump of a country girl, whose existence I had comfortably forgotten till it was recalled to me this morning."

"Ah! this is, indeed, a heavy blow," she said, "but you don't have to do yourself from morning to night with a stupid bumpkin who does not know the difference between the moon and a green cheese. What induced me to give in to Edward this morning I really don't know. He took me by surprise, and before I knew what he had disappeared to send a telegram, and tell this creature that she could come as soon as she liked. So there's an end of all my fun. I know she's going to be simply awful!" Lady Betty cried.

"For name is enough to give one the shivers! Did you ever hear of a girl being called Antonia before?"

Gerald Tenby had been smiling amusedly, scarcely hearing what his companion said. Although he was not very different in color, but at the mention of the name "Antonia" he suddenly became rigid, the smile froze on his lips.

"Antonia! he repeated to himself. 'Antonia Marchmont? What strange fate is this?'

It was strange, yet true, that Tenby had never dreamt of associating Antonia with the pretty society woman whom he saw so frequently, although the similarity of name had led him to do so. There was a fairly wide world of difference between that girl who lived in the bleak north country and Lady Betty Marchmont.

Tenby could not the first outset reconcile his memory of Antonia with the surroundings and the girl of his acquaintance. He felt a little sorry for all those many people among whom he now moved. He felt a little and almost uneasy at the thought of her coming to London. He had tried so hard to forget her this last year or two, and he had almost succeeded in doing so.

Even when he had come north on his frequent visits of duty to his uncle, Sir Maurice Tenby, he had always managed to avoid coming in contact with Antonia. Her home lay not many miles distant, and Gerald could well remember the day when Antonia had been almost a daily visitor at Mill Cross Court.

There was nothing to take the girl there nowadays—at least, that was what he said to himself, savagely, for he did not suppose that Antonia would care to waste much time in paying visits to an old man, and since the marriage of Dortha Tenby, her girl friend, and the sudden disappearance of Hubert Tenby, there had been no one to share Sir Maurice's solitude.

Gerald only went to Mill Cross because he was obliged to go, but he hated going. There was an atmosphere of sorrow in the old place heavy as a pall, and though his uncle was always courteous and seemed much interested in his doings, Gerald Tenby never could rid his mind of the feeling that the proud man in his heart secretly resented his coming.

A Chance for Reform.

If there is any truth in the statement of the small boy whose speech is reported in the Washington Star, the political situation in some parts of our country needs looking into. The history class in one of the public schools of the city had just concluded a recitation the other day, when the teacher took advantage of a few spare minutes to test the knowledge of her pupils concerning the form of the district government.

"In whom is the governing power of this city vested?" was her first question.

Silence reigned for a moment. Then little Tommy's hand went up, and to the teacher's "Well, Tommy?" the following answer was vouchsafed:

"The governors of the district are three misslouries, two taken from civilized life, and one from the Injun corpse."

Dalmatian Possants.

In the interior of Dalmatia the laborers still live in the old patriarchal fashion. The eldest male rules the household as might some czar; in fact, it is not so many years since he had life and death power over its inmates. When a son weds he brings his wife to his father's house, that the property may remain in the family. There, while he works in the field for they are peasant farmers, working lands held by hereditary proprietors, almost as might the serfs of Russia—he tends the dwelling. When his guests come he sends out not only for him, but for the patriarch, since he alone can really welcome the visitor.

NEWS OF RECENT BOOKS

The British and Foreign Bible Society issues a whole copy of the Bible or some portion of it every five seconds. This equals the output of original novels and poems in Indiana.

It is said that J. M. Barrie never writes for more than two hours a day, and is a slow worker. Would that some other novelists worked as slowly and as conscientiously.

It is said that George Ade's income is twelve times as great as that once enjoyed by Dickens. Wonder if anybody will read George Ade's works when their writer has been dead as long as Dickens has?

As illustrating the value set upon old manuscripts and autograph copies of famous works, a recent fire at Yonkers, N. Y., will serve very well. The news dispatches describe in minute detail the damage suffered by certain original Nathaniel Hawthorne manuscripts, and incidentally mention the fact that Julian Hawthorne's home, which contained the literary valuables, was destroyed.

An eastern publishing firm recently put out a new edition of Shakespeare's works, to be sold through subscription. A few days since they were startled to receive the following letter from a New York business man: "Dear Sirs—Last week I ordered a set of Shakespeare in eight volumes. Upon receipt of same I find that the works are dramatized. What I want is Shakespeare in prose. This is undoubtedly an error of your shipping clerk. Kindly make the exchange at your earliest convenience."

Winston Churchill, the English author, has brought upon himself a considerable amount of good natured criticism on account of a ponderous phrase he invented. In speaking of an untruthful statement made by a political opponent he referred to it as a "terminological inexactitude." One writer says that should other authors follow Mr. Churchill's example we may expect to read something like this in a revised version of the George Washington cherry tree story: "Paternal progenitor, I am constitutionally and fundamentally incapable of excoignating ratiocinating or insinuating a terminological inexactitude."

Hjalmar Cassel, a Swedish engineer, who visited this country during the St. Louis fair, has written a book on "American Business Methods." In one chapter he asks one question: "Is the superiority of American industry based on better machinery?" This, he thinks, is not the case, though he finds American tools and machinery superior to those of Europe. The reason for the superiority lies, in the author's opinion, in the better organization of offices and factories, the methodical supervision of every detail, the constant watchfulness that no single branch of a business fall behind, and last but not least the minute division of labor.

Ian MacLaren (Rev. John Watson), author of "Beside the Bonnie Brier Bush," will be a resident of Pittsburgh next year. He has been engaged as lecturer extraordinary for the Western Theological Seminary and will deliver a course of lectures there. He will also act as stated supply for the First Presbyterian church of Uniontown. The church has been vacant since the resignation of Rev. Asa Milholland, a year ago. It is one of the wealthiest churches in the part of the state.

The four sons of Charles Darwin, the author of "The Origin of Species," are all scientists. Sir George Darwin is the Plumian professor of astronomy at Cambridge, Horace Darwin has been associated with him in some of his work, Francis Darwin is a botanist and Major Leonard Darwin a geographer.

Pined for a Looking Glass.

A ward patient in Roosevelt Hospital grew gradually weaker without any apparent reason.

"She's fretting herself to death about something," said the nurse. "If she would confide in me I think she would get better."

By and by the patient did open her mind and heart.

"If I could only see myself," she wailed, "I'd feel different. I know I must look like death, or you'd let me have a looking glass."

"It was against the rules to supply patients in that ward with mirrors, but the nurse, recognizing the gravity of that particular case, smuggled in a small hand glass. The result was miraculous.

"Why, dear me," said the sick woman, "I don't look half so bad as I supposed I did."

And from that hour she began to improve.—New York Sun.

His Lucia Answer.

One day as Pat halted at the top of the river bank, a man famous for his inquisitive mind stopped and asked: "How long have you haunted your wife for the village, my good man?" "T'welve years," "Ah! How many lonesome nights take in a day?" "From tin to fifteen, sor." "Ah, you! Now I have a problem for you. How much water at this rate have you hauled in all, sor?" The driver of the water cart jerked his thumb backward toward the river and replied: "All the water yez ever see there now, sor."

When boys are playing together about every five minutes they hear "You ain't my boy."

BRITAIN'S ELEPHANTS

WEALTH OF THE EMPIRE IN THESE BIG BEASTS.

They Are Located in India and Africa and Are Very Valuable in Industrial Enterprises—Three Interesting Tables.

What with the wealth of India and Africa Great Britain possesses more elephants than any other power in the world. The Indian elephant differs very considerably from the African in several points, notably in the size of the ears, which are much smaller than the African's. Again, the African has an arched forehead while that of the Indian is concave. While the Indian males are about ten feet at the shoulder the African males are a foot higher. The prince of Wales recently had the opportunity of seeing in the famous MacGregor timber yards at Rangoon to what a pitch of usefulness the elephant can be trained in moving large logs of wood. His intelligence at his work is extraordinary. An ordinary elephant can carry half a ton continuously on a level road. A native instructor sits on the back of each elephant and controls his movements, but really the sagacious creatures need little attention.

AT WORK IN A TIMBER YARD.

As a mere figure in pageants the elephant plays a very conspicuous part in the receptions given to the prince and princess, notably at Jammu and Gwalior.

Among the large and varied collection of wild animals, reptiles and birds brought back by Capt. Stanley Flower, of the British army, in his recent expedition to the Blue Nile the first as regards importance and interest are three baby African elephants captured by Arabs in the upper waters of the Blue Nile. One of these was presented by Capt. McDermid, D. S. O., director of the slave trade department, and the other two were purchased. These elephants are from eight to ten months old and are rarely found so young in captivity, those now in Cairo being most probably the first ever brought there, only about half a dozen others being known to exist in the different zoological gardens in the world. Walking about the gardens in charge of their keeper Koonish, Zakieh and Dandy form a most attractive trio, particularly when they lift their large leaflike ears and salute by raising their little trunks to their foreheads and afterwards put these same trunks into the pocket of the visitor in search of something toothsome. It is to be hoped that these fascinating babies may long continue to delight the visitors to the Ghizeh gardens, where they are now attracting much attention.

New Kind of Race. Items in the first great athletic meeting held in China, which took place at Canton, were arithmetic races. Pupils from schools carried sticks and pencils, and in the course of the race they encountered a blackboard containing a sum to be solved. The boys were lined up as they reached the goal, and those whose calculations were wrong were then eliminated. The first three left in the line were counted winners.

Thirteen Eliminated. Application No. 13 to practice law in the state of Missouri will be issued no longer to aspiring law students. Recently a would-be barrister tore it up when it was given to him, and the state board of examiners has since eliminated the number.

Over-Work Weakens Your Kidneys. Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood. All the blood in your body passes through your kidneys once every three minutes. The kidneys are your blood purifiers, they filter out the waste or impurities in the blood. If they are sick or out of order, they fail to do their work.

Pains, aches and rheumatism come from excess of uric acid in the blood, due to neglected kidney trouble. Kidney trouble causes quick or uneasy heart beats, and makes one feel as though they had heart trouble, because the heart is overworking in pumping thick, kidney-poisoned blood through veins and arteries.

It used to be considered that only urinary troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all constitutional diseases have their beginning in kidney trouble.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail. Home of Swamp-Root, free, also pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

Natural Wonders.

Two contrasts of nature are the Land of Fire and the Land of Snow. The Island of Fire is situated in the middle of a large lake of boiling mud in the island of Java. The steam and gases which rise from its surface form themselves into bubbles attaching the diameter of five or six feet, and after sailing high up in the air the balloons, they explode with a loud report. The biggest snow lake is to be seen among the Karakorum mountains, north of India. It measures more than 300 square miles in total area.

Now for another of those sales that have made this store the mecca for eager shoppers and critical people who appreciate good treatment and a stock of goods that is strictly up-to-date and of an exclusiveness and variety that will meet the entire approval of the most fastidious. A good reputation is hard to gain, but now that we have gained it we intend to continue adding to it until instinctively, at the thought of wearing apparel every woman will think of the Hein-Ornstein Co. store. Our policy of liberality and fair dealing has gained us golden opinions from every woman in Lake County, and now that we have gained this enviable standing we do not intend to abate one jot our liberality and efforts to please. We want our customers to share in all good things with us, and we aim to please the young folks as well, for the girl of today is the woman of tomorrow, and while woman is said to be fickle, we dispute the statement, for the women who were our customers during our first week in business, have been shining examples of constancy as patrons, and by kind words and efforts have greatly aided us in extending our list of patrons. As Old Si Hubbard said,

"THE CIRCUS IS A COMING TO TOWN, SUPPOSE WE GO AND SEE THE CLOWN."

We want all the young folks and the old as well, to be able to "see the clown." Therefore, in accord with our usual liberal policy, we have arranged with Gollmar Bros. so that we can give, absolutely FREE, with every Five Dollar Purchase, One 50-cent Ticket or Two 25-cent Tickets to their mammoth Circus and Menagerie. Time will not permit the printer to put into type the bargains we have provided for this sale, but bear in mind that this sale will be one of the notable events of the year. As a mere hint of what we have provided for this occasion we will say that we are offering $5.00 Covert Jackets at $1.98, $18.00 Suits at $9.98, Children's Hats at half price, and other things in proportion.

FREE CHECK ROOM--While the store will close at 6 o'clock, as usual, on Circus Day, Tuesday, May 15, we will open for one hour after the evening performance to accommodate those who leave their packages in our care. Leave your bundles with us. We will take care of them whether purchased at this store or not.

THIS GREAT SALE IS FOR THREE DAYS, SATURDAY, MONDAY, TUESDAY, MAY 12, 14 and 15

Mrs. Z--"Sht! I am waiting to give her a good recommendation to some meat disliker."

NEW NOSE AND PROMOTION

Young Man in the Navy Gains Advancement by Clever Surgical Operation.

No matter how straight a man may shoot, no matter how expert he may be in seamanship, no matter what his knowledge of torpedoes and such things, there is no promotion for him in the United States navy--unless, well, unless he is good looking, says the Chicago Inter Ocean. Uncle Sam will not have petty officers, even, that are not handsome chaps--fellows with good faces under their caps. And so it was that Frank Clancy, five years in the service and one of the cleverest lads on the torpedo boat destroyer Lawrence, could not get a step higher than the rank of Ensign. He passed brilliantly in everything, but to no purpose, for Frank had a nose that was anything but an ornament. It was a hollow nose, with a big, upturned end, which made him look as if a scoop had been at work between it and his eyes.

The young sailor was grievously disappointed and mourned the physical disability that deprived him of advancement. In despair he sought a face specialist, directing him to "kill or cure" the offending member. In 40 minutes Frank Clancy was ready to take his place with the finest looking on board Uncle Sam's ships. And now, thanks to science aiding nature, he is an officer on the Lawrence.

Traveling is dangerous.

Constant motion jars the kidneys which are kept in place in the body by delicate attachments. This is the reason that travelers, trainmen, street car men, teamsters and all who drive very much, suffer from disease in some form. Foley's Kidney Cure strengthens the kidneys and cures all forms of kidney and bladder disease. Geo. E. Haasan, locomotive engineer, Lima, O., writes, "Constant vibration of the engine caused me a great deal of trouble with my kidneys, and I got no relief until I used Foley's Kidney Cure. Sold by J. H. Swan."

Pie Capital.

A lumber firm in Maine has shipped 2,000,000 fiber pie plates to a pie baker in Providence. This seems to settle the question as to what city may be regarded as the capital of the Pie Belt.

STASS BUTTENS.

The rights of the soldier the world over to offer as inconspicuous a shooting mark as possible have been universally admitted. But the industrious policeman is still hampered by an antiquated tradition in the matter of uniform. He is a military anachronism.

Village of Cripples.

The strangest village in the world is undoubtedly the little hamlet of Jatte, near Coler, in France, not far from the Italian frontier, where dwell about 200 deformed men, women and children, who in Paris go by the name of "Culs-de-Jatte." They are deprived of the use of their legs and thighs, and push themselves along in primitive wooden carts with wooden wheels, which they propel by means of a flatiron-shaped block of wood in either hand.

German Export Rates.

The German railroads give quick transit of goods for export at favored rates. The rates from Plauen to Bremen, American Consul Hurst reports, for export, express, are only 38 cents per 100 pounds for a distance of 315 miles, and to Hamburg 37 cents per 100 for 300 miles. If the goods are not for export, the usual rate for express, taking a longer time, costs nearly three times as much.

A Mountain of Gold

Lucia Wilke, of Caroline, Wis., as did one 25c box of Bucklen's Arnica Salve, when it completely cured a running sore on her leg, which had tortured her 23 long years. Greatest antiseptic healer of Piles, Wounds, and Sores. 25c at J. H. Swan's.

Yarns About Students.

Drunkness has of late been charged in England against the students of the University of Oxford. Of this charge Percival Farrar, an Oxford man, said in Detroit:

"Now and then young men drink too much at Oxford, but to accuse them generally of drunkenness is quite unpardonable and false."

"Such an accusation is to my mind absurd, like the accusation of idleness against the students of the great German universities."

"Attendance at lectures is not compulsory in Germany and there are all sorts of yarns about the students' idleness. They say that a young man in Heidelberg once approached another young man and asked:

"Where are the university buildings?"

"The second young man replied: 'I really don't know. I am a student here myself.'"

Equine Distinction.

White horses are stated to be more intelligent than those of a darker color.

THE "SKILLED" MEXICAN.

Was Sounding the Car Wheels, but Didn't Know Why He Was Doing It.

The inefficiency of Mexican labor was under discussion by a group of mining promoters.

"On my last trip to Mexico," said one, "while our train halted at Jimico, a dinner station on the Mexican Central, I alighted and watched the mechanic who went from car to car sounding the wheels with a hammer presumably to test their condition. He was a fair type of the native 'skilled workman.' Just to draw him out a little, I inquired:

"Why do you rap the wheels?"

"Setting down his torch, he stared at me in amazement. 'Because the master mechanic tells me to,' he replied. 'But why?' I persisted. 'What good does it do?' 'I do not know, senor,' said he. 'The master mechanic tells me to strike each wheel, and I do so. That is enough for me.'"

"How long have you been working at this job?" I asked.

"Two years," he replied. For two years he had been going through the form of sounding the car wheels without the slightest knowledge of the object of the test or the slightest curiosity concerning it."

Will Cure Consumption.

A. A. Herren of Finch, Ark., writes: "Foley's Honey and Tar is the best preparation for coughs, colds and lung trouble. I know that it has cured consumption in the first stages. Sold by S. H. Swan."

Sort of Curio Shop.

The surgeons who operated on a man in the London hospital the other day found in him 25 pieces of cork, 20 pieces of tin foil, a leaden bullet, a piece of string 18 inches long, nine-pence in small change, a piece of leather nine inches long with a hook at each end, several pieces of clay pipestem and portions of a newspaper.

Expensive Antics.

Two young men who played the part of ghosts in Galway, Ireland, with extraordinary success, found it an expensive pastime. An elderly woman was acting as caretaker of a vacant house, and the young men gained an entrance to the upper rooms, where their antics so convinced the woman that the house was haunted that she left the place. The owner on his return found feather beds and pictures missing, and for these the two lively ghosts have been sentenced to six months' hard labor.

"Looping the Loop" as a Crime.

Such exhibitions as "looping the loop," including lion den entries, and the like, should be made criminal to all promoters of the same, agents and principals alike. At common law the individual who aids and abets a suicide is guilty of murder. The principle might well be extended to apply to all who, in their own greed, induce, or even solicit, performers in search of a livelihood, to risk life or even bodily harm for public entertainment and harvest of gate money--London Field.

Postmaster Robbed

G. W. Kouts, Postmaster at Ryeaston, Ia., nearly lost his life and was robbed of all comfort, according to his letter, which says: "For 20 years I had chronic liver complaint, which led to such a severe case of jaundice that even my finger nails turned yellow; when my doctor prescribed Electric Bitters, which cured me and have kept me well for eleven years." Sure cure for Biliousness, Neuralgia, Weakness and all stomach, Liver, Kidney and Bladder derangements. A wonderful Tonic, At J. H. Swan.

Country's Youngest Governor.

Herbert J. Hagerman, a native of Milwaukee, just inaugurated governor of New Mexico, was born in 1871 and is the youngest governor in the country. Being unmarried and wealthy, besides having a pleasing personality, he is looked upon with much favor by society in the territory. He has already received a number of rather mushy letters from young women.

Ingenious Invention.

According to a Berlin paper, a Hungarian has invented an electrical device by means of which one man can operate accurately all of the guns on a warship.

Only a Tear.

"Oh! Herbert, I'm sure I felt a rain-rain." "Nonsense, darling; we are for the weeping willow."--N. Y. Telegram.

MAN THE BEST SWIMMER.

Far Ahead of the Lower Animals in the Respect of Nativatory Power.

It is curious that whereas the rabbit cannot swim at all, the hare is an excellent swimmer. The common mouse and the field mouse can only swim a few yards; they drown in the act of swimming. Yet rats swim splendidly. Lions and tigers swim well, although only from necessity--to cross a river, for example.

The horse can swim for miles without being exhausted, and shows a wonderful instinct in choosing the best available landing place. Bears and moles swim well, but bats and monkeys are helpless in the water. All reptiles swim; so do most insects.

Human beings have greater swimming powers than most of the lower animals. A man has been known to swim 30 miles without a stop. The only land animal known to have even approached this performance is the American black bear; but the American deer sometimes swims 12 or 14 miles at a stretch.

Fortunate Missourians

"When I was a druggist, at Livonia, Mo.," writes T. J. Dwyer, now of Ottumwa, Mo., "three of my customers were permanently cured of consumption by Dr. King's New Discovery and the well and strong to day. One was trying to sell his property and move to Arizona, but after using New Discovery a short time he found it unnecessary to do so. I regret Dr. King's New Discovery is the most wonderful medicine in existence." Surest Cough and Cold cure, Throat and Lung healer. Guaranteed by Druggist. 50c. and $1.00 bottles free.

Not to Be Deceived.

Boys, business men of your town know you better than your parents. There eyes are on you when you are least aware. You may slip away from your mother, you may do and deceive your best friends, you may elude the watchful eye of your father, you may trifle with the confidence of your Sunday school superintendent, but you can't fool the business men in your town when they have a peep into the files. Kansas City Journal.

Happy Thought

"Speak up," said Judge Wilson, of London, to a witness. "I find that some one has asked you 'take a drink.'"

You never heard of any one asking Foley's Honey and Tar and not being satisfied. Sold by J. H. Swan.
